The speech language pathologist (SLP) will learn to collaborate with ELD (English language development) teachers to gather information in the pre referral process for special education. ELD teachers have an important role to play in identifying and addressing students' needs, even if they do not have a special education background. This workshop will walk the SLP through the pre-referral process and how to collaborate with the ELD teacher in recognizing red flags that may indicate a possible learning or language disability. A case study will be presented where the ELD teacher and SLP will use a flowchart to learn about the critical questions to ask when considering an English Language Learner student for a referral to special education. The flowchart will allow the ELD teacher to make the appropriate recommendations and report to the speech language pathologist and other members of the special education team. The ELD teacher in collaboration with the speech language pathologist will help answer the question:

Are the academic and English learning challenges due to typical language development or are they related to a learning or language disability. The process of determining whether or not a student is making academic progress due to acculturation, SLIFE (Students with Limited or Interrupted Formal Education) or a possible language disorder will be explained.
